There is daily danger to life and property on the Nevada avenue undercrossing, owing to the neglect of the council to use funds appropriated for the Tejon street crossing for that purpose.

The local campaign is a quiet one. The Republican nominees are for the most part officials of experience and proven value. No one criticises them, no one doubts their election by an overwhelming majority.

With the opening of large bodies of Indian reservation land for settlement after the Indians have received their share in severalty, and with negotiations in progress for the opening of other large areas it may be said that if the Indian question is not settled, it is in a fair way of settlement. Best of all the settlement is being made in a way that is fair both to Indian and white, and without bloodshed.

FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY.

An editorial in The Republic and Telegraph last evening fully endorses all that has been said by this paper in regard to the possibility for the Tejon street undercrossing and the shameful neglect which is responsible for it remaining unfinished. It also gives the information that the crossing will be finished in a short time. It greatly to be hoped that this statement, which so far is not authenticated, may prove true. It cannot come too soon.

The Republic and Telegraph also says: "The only object THE GAZETTE can possibly have in bringing up the matter at this late day, is to score the chairman of the committee having the work in charge, and at whose feet to lay the responsibility for the deplorable condition of affairs connected with the undercrossing."

This statement must have resulted from lack of information which is readily accessible. In its Wednesday's issue THE GAZETTE said:

"Alderman Rouse, as chairman of the street and ditch committee, has done good, honest and faithful work. It is not his fault that matters regarding the railroad crossings are so tangled, and if the council had deferred more to his judgment things would be in much better shape than they now are."

In support of this we would say that the amount estimated by Mr. Ripley, chairman of the street and ditch committee, necessary for this year's expenditures, was $20,000. The amount appropriated was $15,000. The items have been large expenditures which were found necessary which were not included in the estimates; the flume built to keep the flood water from washing out the Nevada avenue undercrossing cost $220, there was expended at the head of the city ditch $500, a considerable sum on the Tenney ditch, and other items unforeseen by the former council. Furthermore in many instances money has been voted by the council from the street and ditch fund for specific purposes, and in some instances against the judgment and wish of the committee. They have been directed to build new sheets to make an approach to the Bijou viaduct, and in all cases where a large amount was to be expended the council has been consulted and action taken by their vote. In spite of this Chairman Rouse by great carefulness and economy managed to get along and would have arranged for the undercrossing if the council had not taken the money to put gravel on a street in West Colorado Springs. There is enough money left in the fund to suffice for the absolutely necessary routine work of the city streets and ditches until next April when a new appropriation can be made. Under these circumstances it is wholly cruel, unjustifiable and false for The Republic and Telegraph to say that,

"The present condition of affairs is directly chargeable to the chairman of the street committee. If he had used ordinary discretion and had displayed a modicum of anxiety earlier in the season, that he now exhibits, he would not behold himself in the humiliating position of having chargeable to his account a bankrupt street fund and an unfinished undercrossing."

The New York Tribune after narrating at some length the failure of the Cleveland administration to secure good and effective government, contrasts it with the present administration, as follows:

"That was a government of negation. To it succeeded a government of purpose and action. Each of the questions with which Mr. Cleveland and his party tinkered so despicably was firmly referred to President Harrison and the Republican party for settlement. In six months the Samoan question was settled by a treaty in which Germany withdrew her pretensions, Malietoa was restored to his throne, and America's interests were safeguarded. The tariff law was framed into a law which relieved the burdens of the people and created new industries by the score. At the same time the administration of the customs laws was simplified and strengthened. The Silver bone was used by the passage of a law that has given monetary use to the entire American product of silver, avoided all the dangers of free coinage, and provided a form of paper circulation better secured than any paper money ever issued by the federal government. A long step has been taken toward the revival of the American merchant marine by the enactment of a law under which fair mail pay will be provided for American steamships engaged in the foreign trade. The Behring sea trouble has been, or soon will be, turned over to arbitrators. The wholesomeness of American pork has been vindicated, and of all these difficult problems not one remains except the Atlantic fisheries. Our interest in them was so compromised by Mr. Bayard's ill judged modus vivendi that the way to the settlement of that difficulty seems to be, for the present, effectually blocked.

"These facts well describe the two parties. The Republican party faces issues and effectually deals with them, and its capacity has never been more clearly or better shown than during the presidency of General Harrison. The Democratic party has never done anything else than furnish proof of the truth of the charge urged against it by George William Curtis in 1884, that it is 'without a single definite principle or policy that it dare avow.'"

MASONIC.

Bro. Ira Berry, Grand Secretary of the Most Jurisdiction Chips.

The recent death of Bro. Ira Berry, grand secretary of the Masons of Maine, was a severe blow to the craft in the state. He was ninety years old. His early years were largely passed in journalism. In 1844 he helped build the first telegraph line from Boston to New York. He became a Mason at an early age, and was elected grand secretary of the grand chapter of Maine in 1855. In 1856 he was chosen grand secretary of the other grand bodies in the state. After that time, up to the date of his death, he devoted his whole time to his Masonic duties. Six children survive him.

Bro. Edward P. Day, the founder and master of Day Star lodge, No. 709, has decided as a gift to the lodge the property at Third avenue and Fifty-first street, Brooklyn, where their hall stands. It is valued at about $30,000.

Bro. Sir Henry Morland, grand master of the lodges working under the authority of the grand lodge of Scotland, in India, has lately died in that country.

There are over one million and a half Freemasons in the world. Great Britain includes about one-sixth of the entire number, and the United States a still larger fraction.

The grand lodge of Canada, at its meeting in Toronto, defeated by a vote of 61 to 60 a motion to prohibit the use of spirituous liquor as beverages at Masonic banquets.

The encampments of Knights Templar in Illinois this year have proven very pleasant and successful. They were held at Rock Island, Havana and Kankakee.

It is officially denied that the Prince of Wales will visit the United States and participate in the dedication ceremonies of the New York Masonic home.

The grand commandery of Kentucky has purchased a lot of ground 74 by 200 on Second street, in Louisville, and will at once erect a Templar temple thereon.

The corner stone of a new Masonic temple has been laid at Mount Vernon, O., by Bro. W. T. Baldwin, junior grand warden, assuming grand master.

Rolla, Mo., is to have a new Masonic hall, the corner stone having been laid.

The office of grand chaplain in grand lodge was first instituted May 1, 1717, in England.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

An Old Time Custom Revived in California—Helmet Gilves.

California lodge, No. 1, has revived an old time custom. At a recent meeting Frank A. Brooks, one of its members, delivered an entertaining lecture entitled "Modern Dentistry," and equipping it of the technical verbiage of the profession succeeded in interesting the members. However, he made no attempt to perform any operations upon any present. It is the intention of California lodge to have a lecture on some interesting subject once a month, together with music, singing and other entertainment.

Florida has a Pythian sanitarium in process of construction, Ohio a Pythian orphans' home and Tennessee a Pythian college. Many other grand jurisdictions have the matter of establishing some sort of a Pythian institution under consideration; and not many years hence each state will have a refuge for indigent Pythian orphans.

The Pythian Voice has good news from all parts of Missouri, including Kansas City, Marysville, Carl Junction, Poplar Bluff, Bismarck, Setalia, Hale City, Kahoka, Lexington, Nevada and Malden. In all these places Pythianism seems to be prospering.

The Pythian Age, of Milwaukee, says the uniform rank of Wisconsin is in a state of innocuous desuetude since the meeting of the supreme session at Milwaukee last year.

Bismarck lodge, No. 152, Bismarck, Mo., is doing splendid work, initiations being plentiful. The lodge is composed chiefly of railroad men, with a few business men added.

The grand lodge of the province held its annual session recently. Grand Keeper of Records and Seal J. C. Henry reported additions for the year to be 157, making the membership June 30, 1891, amount to 701, a net gain of 139. J. Fen Fraser was elected chancellor commander and Mr. J. C. Henry keeper of records and seal.

Pennsylvania has 454 lodges, with a membership of 44,861, a net increase of 2,148 during the year. Ohio has over 500 lodges, with a membership of about 42,000—an increase last year of over 6,000.

A. O. U. W.

Cure in the Admission of New Members in Ohio—Notes.

The following from the report of Grand Medical Examiner Moore, of Ohio, shows well for the care exercised in admitting new members in that jurisdiction: In the fiscal year of 1888 and 1889 there were 900 reports approved by this officer, and in 1889 and 1890 there were 842, and in 1890 and 1891 there have been 711, making in all 1,443 approved applicants, in the three years. There have been six deaths reported, being an average of .8 per cent, out of newly added material during the three years above named.

The second annual session of the Montana grand lodge was held at Helena in August. Official reports show 2,200 members.

The "St. Louis employment bureau" has now thirty lodges enlisted in its work, and this commendable enterprise continues to increase its usefulness in behalf of unemployed brethren.

Balance in relief fund Sept. 1, $10,690 80. There were still some small assessments to be received on this fund from reinstated members.

The St. Louis lodges are arranging a grand reunion in order to advertise and boom the order. The movement was inaugurated by Paragon lodge, and is approved by the grand lodge officials.

The average age of members in the entire order is thirty-nine years.

Grand total of beneficiary fund disbursed by the order from organization to Aug. 1, 1891, $3,652,888.55.

Five lodges in Massachusetts have over 300 members. There has been in that jurisdiction a net gain for the first seven months of this year of 3,382.

Total beneficiary fund disbursed in 1890 to Jan. 1, 1891, as shown by the annual reports, $4,762,137.09.

Junior American Mechanics.

The order has been increasing very rapidly in Pennsylvania within the last year and now has over 200 councils with a membership of over 20,000, showing an increase of about 10,000. There are thirty-five councils in Philadelphia with a membership of about 12,000.

KEENAN'S BOLD CHARGE.

A STIRRING INCIDENT OF THE BATTLE OF CHANCELLORSVILLE.

The Charge of the Eighth Pennsylvania Cavalry on Jackson's Leading Division, Causing Confusion and Delay—In the Confederates—What Survivors Say of It.

(Copyright, 1891, by Robert J. Burdette. All rights reserved.)

HE sank had ache
The leaves with dew were wet;
Down fell a bloody dash
On the woods that second of May.
Where Stonewall's corps, like a beast of prey,
Tore through with angry rush.

Ahe "he trapped at boys!"
R s from sar fire a voice.
With a rush of steel and smoke
On came the rebels straight,
Eager as love and wild as hate:
And our line reeled and broke.

Broke and fled,
No one staid—but the dead!
With curses, shrieks and cries.
Horses and wagons and men
Tumbled back through the shuddering glen,
And above us the rasting skies.

There's one hope, still—
Those batteries parked on the hill!
"Battery, wheel!" could the road
Form platoons, fix prolonge to fire
Retiring." "Trot!" In the panic dire
A bugle rings, "Trot!"—and no gun moves.

The horses plunged,
The cannon lurched and lunged
To join the hopeless rout;
But suddenly rode a leader
Calmly in front of the human storm,
With a stern, commanding shout:

"Align those guns!"
(We knew it was Pleasonton's.)
The cannoneers bent to obey,
And worked with a will at his word,
And the black guns moved as if they had heard
But, oh the dread delay!——

To wait is crime.
O God, for ten minutes' time!
The general looked around
There Keenan sat, like a stone,
With his three hundred horse alone
Less shaken than the ground.

"Major, your men!"
"Are soldiers, sir!" "Then
Charge, major! Do your best.
Hold the enemy back at all cost,
Till my guns are placed; else the army is lost
You die to save the rest!"

By the shrouded gleam of the western skies
Brave Keenan looked in Pleasonton's eyes
For an instant—clear, and cool, and calm!
Then, with a smile, he said, "I will."

"Cavalry, charge!" Not a man of them shrank
Their sharp, full cheer, from rank to rank
Rose jovously, with a willing heart.
Then forward they sprang, and spurred and clashed,
Shouted the officers, crimson sash'd;
Rode well the men, each brave as his fellow,
In their faded coats of the blue and yellow;
And above in the air, with an instinct true,
Like a bird of war their pennon flew.

With clank of scabbards and thunder of hoofs
And flames that shine like tumult roofs,
And sinewy brown faces bravely pale
For fear their proud attempt shall fail,
Three hundred fearless troopers close
On twice ten thousand gallant foes.

Line after line the troopers came
To the edge of the wood that was ring'd with flame;
Rode in and sabered and fought and fell.
Not one came back his wounds to tell.
And full in the midst rode Keenan, tall
In the gloom, like a martyr awaiting his fall,
While the circle of fire of his sabre swung
Round his head, like a halo there luminous hung.

Line after line, ay, whole platoons,
Struck dead in their saddles, of brave dragoons!
By the maddened horses wide onward borne
And into the forest rode, tramp'd and torn;
As Keenan fought with his men side by side,
So they rode, till there were no more to ride.

But over them, lying there, shattered and mute,
What deep echo rolls? 'Tis a death salute
From the cannon in place, for heroes new braved
Your fate not in vain; the army was saved!

Over them now, year following year,
Over their graves the pine cones fall.
And the whip-poor-will chants his requiem full.
But they stir not again; they raise no cheer;
They have ceased. But their glory shall never cease,
Nor their light be quenched in the light of peace.
The flash of their charge is a sounding still
That saved the army at Chancellorsville.

—George Parsons Lathrop.

Maj. Keenan's daring deed at Chancellorsville, May 3, 1863, was worthy the immortal setting given it by the poet, and the world should know how much Hooker, who is often quoted, though falsely so, as deriding the cavalry, owed to the gallant troopers on that disastrous battlefield. The published accounts of the charge have given rise to much controversy, but conflicting statements may be so harmonized as to confirm the essential particulars, and I give below the stories of participants who have told of various phases of the affair, as remembered long years after.

In "Battles and Leaders of the Civil War" (Century Co., publishers), John E. Collins, a member of Keenan's battalion of the Eighth Pennsylvania cavalry, describes the incident in a paper recounting his personal experiences in the charge. He says: "On the afternoon of May 2, 1863, the Eighth Pennsylvania cavalry was ordered to dismount, pack saddle, girths and rest in the vicinity of Gen. Hooker's headquarters at Chancellorsville. Some of the men fell asleep holding their horses, some began talking of the battle, while a knot of officers, who always improved such occasions in this way, sat down to their favorite game of poker. Suddenly an order from headquarters made a complete change in the scene. At the word 'mount' the sleepers as well as the talkers sprang into their saddles, the gamblers snatched up their stakes and theft cards, and a regiment of cavalry took the place of a lounging crowd.

"Passing to the left of Chancellorsville House we formed our line of battle at the edge of a wood and came up with a reconcentering party that had captured the Twenty-third Georgia. We had heard that Lee was retreating and supposed that this unfortunate regiment had been sacrificed to give the main body a chance to escape; but while we were commiserating the poor fellows, one of them defiantly cried, 'You may think you have done a big thing just now, but wait till Jackson gets around on your right.'

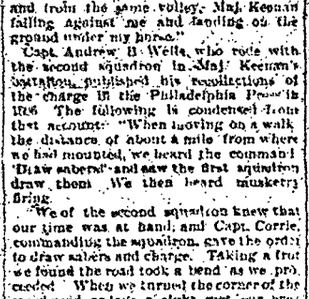
"We laughed at this harmless bravado, for we did not think he would betray Jackson's movement had he known anything about it; but while we were yet trying to get through the thick wood the roar of musketry and artillery on our right confirmed his speech. We now came back at a gallop toward a point between the place where we were resting and the place where the battle was raging. As we rode into an opening called Hazel Grove, the regiment was brought into line. We surveyed each other and nervously braced ourselves for the ordeal, not knowing whether we were to make an attack or wait there to receive one.

"The roar of musketry was now heavier and nearer, the vast woods between us and Dowdalls seemed to shake with it. There was no time to ask or to wonder what had happened, for the regiment was ordered off at a gallop. After riding about three hundred yards we turned into a narrow road that promised to take us into the midst of the enemy. Half a dozen infantrymen—each grey, most likely a general's staff—commenting, as they did not rise in ranks—were in the road ahead of us, and turned back to their lines.

"The word charge was now passed from the leading squadron and sabers flew into the air along our line; but none too soon, for we were already in the midst of them, and they were ready for us. The unfortunate squadron that had caught all the fire as we dashed along the narrow lane, and we who rode next to it not only the smoke from the enemy's guns. We could reach nothing as yet, and could see nothing but fire and smoke, for their line of battle was safely posted behind as thicket that lined the rest of the road, while their rifles were aimed through it.

"It was a long lane and a hot lane to go through, but the lane had a turn and we got to it at last, when we reached the Plank road and struck Rodes' (Confederate) division right in the front. We struck it as a wave strikes a ship—the ship is engovered, may be thrown on her beam ends, but the wave is dashed into spray and the ship rolls on as before.

"Maj. Keenan, who led his battalion in the charge, the captain in command of the leading squadron, the adjutant and a few score of their followers went down at this shock together. The adjutant went over to recover their bodies after the battle and the major had thirteen bullets in his body.



DEATH OF MAJ. KEENAN.

the adjutant nine and the others fewer. It was reported by some who rode close to the major that he shouted, 'To the right!' seeing that the impenetrable masses on his left could not be forced, and that there was no way out but over the thinner lines on his right. When turning at full speed my horse was killed and I was pitched over his head on the roadside. Here I parted company with the regiment. When I jumped to my feet I had time to take one glance at my surroundings. My sole thought was to escape capture or death. On one side were heavy lines of Confederate infantry doubled and bent by the charge, their officers trying to recover their alignment; on the other side the survivors of the leading squadrons were galloping on the Plank road, the others breaking over the Confederate skirmish lines as far back as I could see into the woods."

Col. Pennock Huey, who was major of the Second battalion of the Eighth Pennsylvania cavalry at the time, has published a history of the charge, which he describes substantially as follows: "On reaching the Plank road it appeared to be packed about as closely with the enemy as it possibly could be. We turned to the left, facing the Confederate column, the regiment crowding on, both men and horses, in a frenzy of excitement which nothing but death could stop. We cut our way through, trampling down all who could not escape us, and using our sabers on all within reach for a distance of about a hundred yards, when we received a volley from the enemy which killed Maj. Keenan, Capt. Arrowsmith and Adjt. Haddock, three of the noblest and most gallant officers of the regt, besides a large number of men. All three of the above named officers fell at the same time and from the same volley. Maj. Keenan falling against me and landing on the ground under my horse."

Capt. Andrew B. Wells, who rode with the second squadron in Maj. Keenan's battalion, published his recollections of the charge in the Philadelphia Press in 1886. The following is condensed from that account: "When moving on a walk the distance of about a mile from where we had mounted, we heard the command 'Draw sabers!' and saw the first squadron draw them. We then heard musketry firing.

"We of the second squadron knew that our time was at hand; and Capt. Corrie, commanding the squadron, gave the order to draw sabers and charge. Taking a trot we found the road took a bend as we proceeded. When we turned the corner of the wood-road, or lane, a sight met our eyes that it is impossible for me to describe. After charging over the dead men and horses of the first squadron we charged into Jackson's column, and as luck would have it, found them with empty rifles, thanks to our dead comrades ahead. The enemy were as thick as bees, and we appeared to be among thousands of them in an instant.

"The enemy were as much surprised as we were, and thought, no doubt, as they now say, that the whole cavalry corps of the Army of the Potomac was charging them. I remember hearing a number of them call out, 'I surrender! I surrender!' We did not stop to take any prisoners. We could not further proceed and get out in the face of the enemy, and the only thing left for us was to go through them, sink or swim."

The charge had all the effect of a successful forlorn hope, and Keenan's fall at the head of his band places his name with those of Farnsworth, Bayard, Lowell and other heroes of the cavalry.

AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR.

The Division of the Reserve Fund—Analysis of Membership.

The Argus, of Red Wing, Minn., says: "The American Legion of Honor, a fraternal life insurance organization, with headquarters at Boston, has declared a dividend, the first of the kind ever made by such a society. In 1887 the supreme council adopted a low setting apart 5 per cent. of all moneys received on assessments for death losses as a reserve fund, this fund not to exceed $500,000. January, 1891, this fund amounted to more than that allowed, and by July, 1891, it had amounted to $525,350.73. It was decided therefore to divide the surplus among all those who had for five years or more been members. The amount to each member is about one and one-tenth assessments. This reserve fund will be added to until the law requiring a deduction of 5 per cent. is changed or repealed, and each member in good standing will hereafter receive, back, on the 1st of July, his or her share of the surplus over $500,000.

"On June 30, 1891, the membership was as follows: Males, 55,665; females, 7,778; honorary, 143; total, 63,743. This shows a loss of 407 honorary members, a gain of 1,961 beneficial members and a net gain of membership of 1,495. It is interesting to note that a very large part of this gain in membership came to the order since Jan. 1 last, and during the time that three assessments per month were being called. From July 1, 1890, to Dec. 30, 1890, the gain was very small, about 100 each semiannual term. From Jan. 1 to June 30 this year the gain has been 1,100; total net gain for the supreme council term, 1,495."

SINCE CROMWELL'S TIME

FOR TWO CENTURIES THE PARNELLS HAVE BEEN RESIDENTS OF IRELAND.

The Public Record of the Family to Which Charles Stewart Parnell Belonged—Personal Characteristics of the Deceased Home Rule Leader.

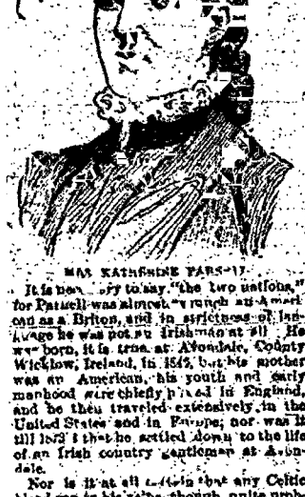
[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.]

Death has suddenly ended the schism in the Irish Home Rule party so far as it was personal. Charles Stewart Parnell, whose renown had astonished the civilized world, who had risen to a great leadership more rapidly than any statesman in recent times and had then sustained a swifter fall and more complete ruin, is dead at the early age of forty-five.

And before news of the fact could reach America there came simultaneous announcements of the death of the Right Honorable William Henry Smith, Parnell's bitterest opponent in parliament, and of Sir John Pope Hennessy, the first to defeat a Parnellite candidate. Not for many a year, if ever indeed, has there been such an extraordinary coincidence in British politics. The death of these three within a few hours, and in such a peculiar conjunction of affairs, must lead to results which it fatigues the imagination to conjecture.

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL.

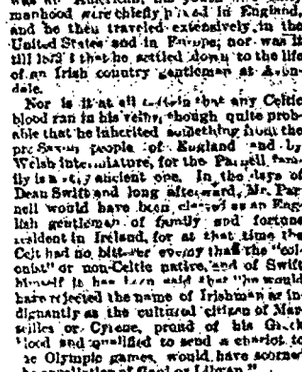
At least three times in the last ten years those most intimate with Mr. Parnell have announced, on what they considered good medical authority, that his death was near at hand, and more than once he has appeared in parliament with all the physical indications of rapid decline. Yet these things had been forgotten during his last heroic fight, and his death took the two nations by surprise. He was sick four days, and it is quite probable that his recent struggles had exhausted his nervous force, for he died of a congestive chill



MRS. KATHERINE PARNELL.

It is now easy to say "the two nations," for Parnell was almost as much an American as a Briton, and in strictness of language he was not an Irishman at all. He was born, it is true, at Avondale, County Wicklow, Ireland, in 1846, but his mother was an American, his youth and early manhood were chiefly passed in England, and he then traveled extensively in the United States and in Europe; nor was it till 1873 that he settled down to the life of an Irish country gentleman at Avondale.

Nor is it at all certain that any Celtic blood ran in his veins, though quite probable that he inherited something from the pre-Saxon people of England and by Welsh intermixture, for the Parnell family is a very ancient one. In the days of Dean Swift and long afterward, Mr. Parnell would have been classed as an English gentleman of family and fortune resident in Ireland, for at that time the Celt had no bitterer enemy than the "colonist" or non-Celtic native, and of Swift himself it has been said that "he would have rejected the name of Irishman as indignantly as the cultured citizen of Marseilles or Cyrene, proud of his Greek blood and qualified to send a chariot to the Olympic games, would have scorned the appellation of Gaul or Libyan."



SIR JOHN POPE HENNESSY.

One of those who first advocated the repeal of the "Corn Laws," and was very active in the most liberal section of the Whig party. Indeed, the Parnells have always been on the liberal side in politics, and old Sir John resigned the office of chancellor of the exchequer rather than vote for the "Act of Union," which abolished the Irish parliament. He was the great-grandfather of Charles Stewart by a different line from that of the Baron Love Congleton.

Nearly three generations passed after the settlement by William of Orange before the "Colonists," as they were called, began to affiliate politically with the Celts; then Irish champions of Protestant faith and Saxon lineage took the lead and the long and brilliant line of patriots and orators of that class is unbroken, beginning with Curran, Grattan and Parnell, and continuing with Moore, Emmett, Mitchell and many more down to the last Parnell. He was, however, even less Irish in general makeup than his ancestors of the Eighteenth century.

It is a fact often noticed and commented on that Dane and Saxon, Norman, Scot and Free Englishman have founded families in Ireland, which, as a rule, soon took on the characteristics of the old native stock. In local feeling it was often remarked that they became "more Irish than the Irish themselves," while they exhibited the same traits of wit and humor, vivacity, eloquence and poetic genius. But Mr. Parnell was singularly cool and reserved, less ardent than an Englishman, less impulsive than a Scotchman and less vivacious than a Dutchman. Those who admired him most often complained of his cold and austere manner, and in view of his latest performance it seems like cruel satire to repeat that in his college career and even later he was habitually spoken of as a "woman hater"—at any rate, as one totally indifferent to female charms.

About 40 years ago the whole Parnell family turned their attention toward America, and the father of Charles Stewart; remained in the New World long enough to woo and win Delia Stewart, the beautiful and talented daughter of Commodore Charles Stewart, of the United States navy. And about this lady some strange and painful statements have been made. After living in Ireland till her children were grown, and being at one time a great favorite in Dublin society, she returned to the United States and now lives at Bordentown, N. J., in poverty. There seems to be no doubt about it. She was at one time actually dependent upon charity.

At the same time her distinguished son appears to have been living in comparative affluence, and another son was and still is a fairly prosperous fruit grower in one of the southern states. Her favorite daughter, Fanny Parnell, died before this season of extreme poverty began; the other two daughters remain in comparative obscurity in Ireland, and Mrs. Parnell's only companion and attendant is Michael Slavin, an old servant who shared her prosperity and will not desert her in adversity.

In 1874, soon after taking up his residence in Wicklow, Mr. Parnell was made high sheriff of the county. He made the race for parliament the same year and was defeated, but the next year he was chosen member for County Meath. In 1877 he began his career as advocate of the tenant-class by introducing a bill to facilitate the purchase, in small tracts, of lands formerly held by the established church. Of course, it was defeated, but Mr. Parnell had taken high rank as an opponent of the government, and in 1879 began what is known as the "Parnell movement."

In 1879 he succeeded in getting punishment with the whip abolished. Oct. 21, 1879, the Irish National Land League was established, Mr. Parnell being its president, and he made a tour in America to collect funds. In 1880 he was indicted on various grounds, but the jury disagreed. Feb. 3, 1881, he and thirty-four of his supporters were removed from the house of commons by the sergeant-at-arms as "obstructionists," and on Oct. 13 he was arrested and confined in Kilmainham jail. On May 2, 1882, he was released, with Kelly and O'Brien, and then the long fight began, which is still in progress.

Subsequent events are fresh in the public mind. That Mr. Parnell was at the very summit of popularity when, in December, 1889, Captain O'Shea began the famous suit, that he was politically ruined by the result and that his marriage with Mrs. O'Shea helped the matter but little, are recent facts which carry their own moral. It is a strange, sad, eventful history of a man leading a double life so successfully as to deceive two nations.

J. H. BEATTY.

The Methodist Church, South.

The leading topics under discussion at the great Methodist conference in Washington are such as the title of the gathering suggests, viz., "Ecumenical." That is, the universal church, the Ecumenical Methodist church, the really catholic or universal church. This topic and the claims of Methodism to be considered a truly universal church are treated by the most powerful minds in the conference, and it goes without saying that their papers and the discussion they excite will be of intense interest.

Akin to this, and indeed a part of it, is the great question of Christian unity, and of course another effort is on foot to foster the fraternization of all the Methodist bodies of the United States and Canada. The greatest division, as everybody knows, was that of 1845, for in May of that year was organized at Louisville the body now known as the Methodist Church, South. It raises a smile or a sigh, according to the reader's temperament, to recall that peculiar three, but now all can smile at the confident predictions of rash editors that the Methodist church was ruined "a dying body." The Methodist Church, South, now includes about 1,000,000 members, and its 1890 general conference at St. Louis was an occasion when the most extraordinary ability was displayed.

CHICAGO'S FAIR CENTURY RIDER.

Miss Alice Waugh, Who Recently Made a 103 Mile Run in Four Hours 18 Minutes.

Miss Alice Waugh, a pretty Chicago school teacher, who is as strong and plucky as she is pretty, recently performed a feat that has made her the envied one among all the other pretty school teachers of the World's fair city.

Miss Waugh is an enthusiastic bicyclist and she recently pushed her safety wheel 103 miles in four hours and sixteen minutes, making what is known among cyclists as a "century run." She has the distinction of being the first Chicago woman to make a century run under the recently adopted sixteen hour limit.

Miss Waugh made the run to Aurora and return against a strong wind in 15h. 45m. up a solid tired safety. She is only twenty-one years of age, and in view of the fact that she has only been riding about four months, her performance is really remarkable. She teaches the young Chicago idea how to shoot in the Central Park school.

Mrs. Henry Aiken, of Maywood, was the first Cook county woman to ride a century, but her feat was less noteworthy, as she made the run at a time when twenty four hours were allowed.

Palmer Lake Items.

Our people yearn for a better road to the Divide country and steps are being taken to secure one.

Prof. I. W. Gard is teaching a very successful term of school here. The attendance is larger than during any previous term.

The literary society held its regular Saturday night last Thursday night, owing to the dood president, Dr. J. J. Dunn, who died of asthma last week.

K. C. Curtis will have control of The Herald agency on the first of next month, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. I. Wilson expiring on that date.

J. L. Judd, the popular manager of the D. A. R. Grazing house, has arranged with the company to build a large hotel near the site of the old house.

B. H. Phillips and E. C. Gard are building handsome residences in East Palmer Lake. The latter's will consist of eleven rooms. They occupy the finest locations in Palmer Lake.

Some cowardly fiend has been poisoning dogs and other animals at this place for the last six months. J. E. Campbell, J. J. Munger and W. M. Younger each lost a dog on Sunday night last.

The first white woman that ever set foot on Colorado soil is now a resident of Palmer Lake. She is Mrs. C. Murat, for many years a resident of Denver. Her husband was a relative of Napoleon's great field marshal, bearing the same name.

The Divide farmers, as a class, have no faith in the Farmers' Alliance movement. They regard it as the vagaries and fancies of fevered imaginations, bordering upon socialism and destined to stop upon the jagged rocks of political disintegration.

The political outlook here is most encouraging for the Republican ticket. No town in Colorado possesses a greater proportion of straightout Republicans than does Palmer Lake. The ticket as named by the convention is considered a good one.

The Palmer Lake Town company has reorganized under the name and style of the Palmer Lake Investment company. The new organization has for its president Granville Malcom, of Denver, and a number of attractive and expensive improvements are looked for the coming season.

A company of Palmer Lake people, consisting of E. C. Gard, E. S. Hall, J. E. Campbell and others, is being organized to develop the Divide country in general and Palmer Lake in particular. The company will buy and sell real estate, mines and securities, will act as trustee, negotiate loans, insure property, advertise new enterprises and towns, etc. The concern will be a stock company which will operate throughout the state of Colorado, with the principal office at Palmer Lake. The Roswell Strike.

The Rock Island strikers at the Rock Island round house at Roswell still continue idle, and are firm in their intentions not to return to the employment of the road. The reduction from ten to nine hours making a corresponding reduction in the wages was made not only among the engine wipers but among all the Rock Island's employes, and there is a general tendency to sympathize with the strikers with all the round house men. After the strike two or three of the Rapid Transit company's men and a few others filled the vacant places for a while, but on becoming aware of the state of affairs gave up the employment out of sympathy for the men who had struck. Nevertheless all the vacant places are now filled. The strikers do not seem to entertain any great animosity, and are quietly waiting their time until they can find other employment. Their names are as follows: Rudy A. Waldburger, night foreman at the round house; John McDowell, E. Brosso, Harry Langdon, Harry Bulgott, John Hill, Walter Batey, Harvey Lockwood, Bert Dinonfeltzer, and Frank Wisdom. Four of these were the engine wipers.

COLORADO COLLEGE

Palmer hall on past occasions when illuminations was required has always been lit only by old fashioned kerosene lamps which have smoked, broken, exploded, and shed so little moonlight where sunbeams were required, until they have gained the thorough disgust of everyone. But of late, when chapel, lectures and recitation rooms are used in the evening, the introduction of electricity seems to be an absolute necessity, and a movement is soon to be inaugurated by which it is hoped to replace the primitive illuminators so long in use, with the more modern and useful arc and incandescent lights.

General order No. 3 issued from the headquarters of the College Cadets, and bearing the date of Oct. 16, 1891, reads as follows:

"The following non-commissioned officers are hereby appointed to serve during the present term: Quartermaster sergeant, R. D. Barnes; first sergeant, N. M. Estey; second sergeant, Lee Watson; third sergeant, T. C. Strachan; color sergeant, E. M. Stedman; first corporal, A. J. Lawton; second corporal, W. M. Barkhorn; third corporal, M. C. Bland; fourth corporal, Worrall Wilson. GEO. S. GOODALE, Captain."

Yesterday morning some mischievously disposed person erected on the barren campus a sign board bearing the well known legend:

KEEP OFF THE GRASS.

But the sign met a hapless fate at the hands of the conscientious janitor, Mr. Wing, who immediately used it to help heat the college buildings. No doubt the inscription was intended as a sarcastic reminder of the fact that the students would be glad to have some grass to keep off of. But patience! The new company organized for the improvement of the northern part of the city proposes, it is said, to convert the entire campus into a beautiful lawn next spring. May it be done!

The improvements in the basement of Palmer Hall are now nearly completed. It is to be hoped that for the benefit of students with tender nasal organisms, odoriferous chemicals will no longer be compounded where their fragrance may be wafted into the recitation rooms.

The college tennis club is to be reorganized next week, it is expected with a larger membership than ever. The club will probably use two of the courts of the Colorado Springs Tennis club, on the College park.

The gymnasium is much resorted to during vacant hours and in the afternoons. Apparatus is scarce but what there is is the best, and is almost constantly in use.

A reception is to be held this afternoon in Montgomery hall, from 4 until 6, to welcome home Mrs. Slocum and Mrs. Fagerman, on their return from Europe.

The Phonix Literary society will hold its first meeting for the year in the chapel this evening at 7:45.

The cottage just west of the dormitory, which has been built for the janitor, is now completed and just occupied.

The awkward squad will drill with guns for the first time on next Tuesday.

PERSONAL.

Professor Monfort has been appointed as representative of the faculty on the gymnasium committee.

Miss Anna Mosenthal, a Russian young lady, is taking a course in college preparatory to studying medicine in another institution.

Professor Chapman, between leading to his classes at the college and those at the high school, has had his hands full of late.

Mrs. Slocum after spending a few weeks since her return from England in visiting friends in the east, arrived home on Thursday evening.

Messrs. J. E. Grove, Reuben Morley and Milnor Roberts, made the ascent to Mount Garfield last Saturday, on foot. They report having to wade through considerable snow.

Rev. Mr. Hood, a Congregational divine, was present at chapel exercises Monday morning, and made a similar appeal, asking that more students might enter the profession of the ministry.

Miss Pearl Cooper has been chosen as representative of the senior preparatory class on the staff of the Collegian. Miss Cooper was formerly connected with the high school tower.

Dr. Taylor, father of the Rev. L. L. Taylor, recently called to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church of this city, gave a very earnest and instructive talk to the students in the chapel on Wednesday morning.

CHOOSE YOUR ROUTE.

If you are thinking of going to California call at the Santa Fe ticket office in the Opera House Block and get information of the cost. The same advice will apply if you are contemplating a trip to any point in Texas. The Santa Fe line extends through the states named and affords the best accommodations. Tourist rates to Pacific coast all the year around.

PARLOR CARS.

Our citizens who have not tried those parlor cars on the afternoon Santa Fe trains should do so. The cars are certainly parlors and the chairs as comfortable as the finest parlor chairs, and to be occupied with the ordinary chair cars is something entirely new. Trains carrying these leave for Pueblo at 10.45 a. m. and for Denver at 4.45 p. m.

Denver and Rio Grande R. R. six daily trains:
Round trip to Denver $4 50
Round trip to Pueblo 2 50

THE GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1891.

Mr. Civill, of the firm of Civill & Wills, has returned from his visit to New York.

The Pike's Peak and Manitou cog road will run its last train for the season on Saturday.

Mrs. R. J. Van Petten leaves for Kansas City to-day over the Santa Fe to be at home some time.

Mrs. Whitlock announces evening lectures on the evenings of Oct. 23d, Nov. 6th and 20th, and Dec. 4th, 18th and 31st.

Mrs. S. J. Miller, mother of J. K. and Will Miller, left last evening for Chicago where she will hereafter make her home.

President R. R. Cable, of the Rock Island railroad, arrived in the city yesterday morning to visit his son, H. S. Cable, whose illness has been reported in these columns.

Articles of incorporation of the Woody Creek Toll Road company, which has as an object the building of a toll road in Garfield county, were filed with the county clerk yesterday.

Lieutenant Nichols and his men, who have kept a muster station at the Alamo hotel during the last few days, will leave this morning. They were not very successful in securing recruits.

The First Baptist church has decided to have a psalter for use in responsive readings in the church. Professor Bach, instructor of music in the public schools, has also been chosen as musical director.

Cards have been issued announcing the marriage of Miss Hazen Kerr, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. J. H. Kerr, to Henry M. Blackmer, which occurs at the First Congregational church Oct. 20, at 11:30 a. m.

The Sunday school of the First Baptist church is planning to give a harvest home festival next Sunday night. The church is to be elaborately decorated and the programme will include some excellent pieces.

Mr. P. M. Posath, representing Rosenbaum Bros. of New York, was in the city yesterday and established an agency for the sale of their fine whiskies with Van Petten Bros. Their advertisement appears in another column.

A sidewalk is being placed in the alley beside the opera house and upon show nights the place will be lit with electricity. This will permit of the side doors being used for egress from the main portion of the house.

The special services of the First M. E. church each evening are largely attended and increasing in interest. The singing of Mr. E. F. Miller is greatly enjoyed by those present. Several have already expressed a desire to begin a Christian life.

Our city has been called to mourn in the list of officers of the Colorado Springs Aid society as published in yesterday's issue. The name of Mrs. J. B. Covey should be substituted for that of Mrs. J. F. Humphrey as chairman of the Fourth ward.

Wm. Thompson, the lunatic brought into this city from Turkey creek a short time ago and who has since been confined in the county jail, was sent Wednesday night to his father's home in Nebraska. His condition has considerably improved since his confinement.

In the window of Van Petten Bros. shoe store is displayed the mammoth boot. It was raised on the ranch of C. Aumock, ten miles from town, and is a good sample of what can be done in Colorado. It weighs 14 pounds, and measures 28 inches in length and 16 inches in circumference.

Following is Enos P. Moon's record of the weather for the week ending Oct. 14, taken at Husted, Colo.: Highest temperature, 82° on the 11th; lowest temperature, 18° on the 13th; weekly mean temperature, 47.07°. Direction of the wind, north 2 days, south 4 days, varying 1 day.

The results of the stocking of Prospect Lake with trout are already very apparent. The repulsive pests called "water dogs" have almost disappeared while silvery fish can be seen springing from the water after flies. The warm shoal waters are filled with myriads of trout fry which will afford fine angling in a few years.

Col. Charles G. McCauley, who died in New York on the 13th inst., was commandant of the United States marine corps for many years, and retired by reason of age after a service of over forty years. Commandant of the marine corps ranks with brigadier general in the regular army. He had a number of acquaintances and relatives in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hagerman and Mr. Henry C. Lowe returned from the east on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Hagerman have spent the last six months in Europe and Mr. Hagerman returns very greatly improved in health. Mr. Lowe states that he finds the business outlook in the east exceedingly fine and believes that the next two or three years will be exceedingly prosperous.

Mrs. Mary Calhoun Dixon, the eminent reader and elocution teacher, returned to the city yesterday after a very pleasant and successful trip to Utah. The citizens of Colorado Springs will be pleased to know that Mrs. Dixon will soon be heard in this city, probably for the benefit of some well-known charity. Arrangements for the entertainment have not yet been completed.

The county commissioners were busy yesterday examining plans for the new jail. Representatives of a number of firms were present with plans and each patiently explained them to the commissioners. It is probable that the contract will be let in a few days. Among those submitting plans are the following: Pauley Jail company, F. J. Meyer Manufacturing company, The Champion Iron Co., The Bullen Iron Bridge company, E. G. Hodgson, the Denver architect, and Atkinson & Sons of this city.

"The Story of the Huguenots" is the subject of the lecture at the Baptist church Monday, Oct. 26, by Rev. R. S. MacArthur, D. D., who also preaches the sermon on the dedication of the church, Sunday, Oct. 25. This lecture covers one of the most peculiar and fascinating periods in history. It was first delivered by him before the Patriotic League of New York on the occasion of 300th [illegible] in Washington, D. C., to an audience which overflowed the largest church in that city. Justice Harlan of the supreme court presiding and over twenty senators and 100 representatives in congress being in attendance.

Mr. M. Parkerson, hero of the New Orleans Mafia troubles, arrived in this city yesterday to return home with his invalid wife, who has been spending the season here and in Manitou.

Mr. Mike Dunigan, formerly with the Elk hotel, is now connected with the New Alamo, and greets the guests of that popular hostelry at the depots upon their arrival.

Sol Smith Russell.

And now comes stately, lady-like, friend Sol Smith Russell, and that means an evening of delightful, wholesome comedy at the opera house to-morrow evening. Mr. Russell has achieved a triumph this season in his new play, "Peace of Valley," that has never been excelled by any comedian in America. This successful new play is by Edward E. Kidder, and is founded on the actor's personal observations of that class of typical Americans from which Lincoln, Webster, Greeley, Garfield and others have sprung. It breathes the wholesome, invigorating air of the old New England mountain farm. Justice is the high ideal of its central character, and the lesson is enforced through the medium of a well-educated country boy, unsophisticated in city ways, green in manner, but with a character incapable of doing any wrong—Hosea Howe by name. At the opening of the play Hosea Howe is seen as a waiter at the Mountain hotel, a summer resort in New England, earning enough money to pay his way through college. He meets a city girl, and from the admiration of each for the other a good deal of humor is extracted. The scene is in the Peaceful Valley mountains, and the character of Hosea Howe is brought into relief by the surroundings of city-bred people.

Photographing a Bubble.

After photographing horses jumping athletes, flying cannon balls, flashes of lightning and the shifting spiral lines of revolving double gears have been successfully photographed, the fairy soap bubble has furnished a stumbling block that the scientific photographer has had great difficulty in surmounting. Lord Rayleigh, in a lecture before the Royal Institution of London, said that for some time it had been his ambition to photograph a soap bubble in the act of breaking.

He anticipated great difficulty because he knew the time occupied in the disappearance of a bursting bubble must be but a small fraction of a second.

Whoever has watched a brilliant soap bubble long knows how instantaneously it vanishes. Lord Rayleigh thought it might take one-twentieth of a second, but by repeated experiments he found that the time occupied in the disappearance of the iridescent film was not more than one-three hundredth of a second.

To catch and picture a vanishing film between the instant of its bursting and that of its complete extinction proved a most difficult undertaking, but it was accomplished.

Some persons may think that it would be equally difficult to photograph a lightning flash, but it must be recollected that lightning makes an intensely vivid impression, while the soft iridescence of a soap bubble is evanescent, even in the bright glare of an electric spark.

From printing the image of the flying edge of a broken bubble in the three hundredth of a second, to disclosing the existence of great nebulæ in the heavens by the cumulative effect of several hours of continuous exposure, the modern photographic plate is performing many wonders in behalf of science, and proving itself one of the most powerful means at man's disposal to unlock the secrets of nature.—Youth's Companion.

Dairy Day Customers for Boston Women.

The Woman's Dress Reform club in Boston numbers some 200 members, comprising teachers, doctors, writers and other professional workers. The first rainy day all the members are pledged to appear in a stormy weather costume, consisting of a bill skirt, a pair of cloth leggings a little way below the knees and revealing gaiters of waterproof cloth or riding boots. A reefer coat will cover the upper part of the figure and a tam-o'-shanter hat complete the costume.—New York Sun.
